

Evil Pretty.

Preface:

Ages ago there were magical and evil beings that roamed the earth and kept themselves hidden and secret from normal humans. They were very different from one another and they all possessed great powers and abilities. There were five races of good magical beings and five races of bad evil beings. For every evil there is good and for every right there is a wrong. There was a natural check and balance to keep the world and powers that be at a constant equal level. Their differences quickly grew into hatred for one another. The evil races wanted to gain power and control of the world. The magical races refused to let the evil races gain total control of their world. Battles and wars followed their lives for generations. Hatred builds as time went on; the numbers of all the beings good and evil grew shorter and shorter as many small battles claimed hundreds of lives.

Close to extinction, all the races evil and magical decided to have one last single battle. It would be a battle that will choose the outcome of the world, a final battle. A battle of good versus evil was in full effect. A vicious war of magic and power claimed the lives of hundreds. Towards the end of this battle, only ten beings were left, one member from each race managed to survive. The strongest members of each race were the ones that were left at the end. All were female and all had nothing else to live for. Their families and way of living were now gone for ever.

Everyone looked around, they all knew their ancestry and their presence in the world was about to come to an end. With nothing else to do, nothing else to live for, they all lined up in a circle, good on one side and evil on the other. They all stared at each other in the eye and ran towards the center of the circle for their last battle. As they were all about to attack each other a magical beam surrounded them.

All ten women were grabbed by this magical beam. As it goes opposites attract, it lined them up face to face with their opposite. Every good being was faced with an evil being. There was a Lycan was faced with a Telben, Agen faced with a Vampire, Witch faced with a Fairy, Mermaid faced with an Acuagiel, and a Geonie faced with a Zombie. All did not understand what was taking place, but they were all powerless to the magic. The magical beam forced their bodies, their powers, and their life force together. The earth's power source had taken a hold of them in an attempt to keep the world at an equal balance.

The women were released as the magical beam disappeared. Five women remained as the five women were a creation of the ten women. These five women became human but they all contained the power of good and evil inside them. They contained the powers of both of the beings that they were fused with. These women all separated and fled from one another. All did not know what they were to do from here. They must learn how to control their new powers and find their place in their new world.